

Welcome to

birdworld kuranda

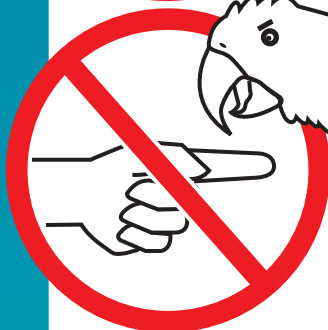

As part of our commitment and concern for your safety, we would ask that you read and acknowledge the following safety, interaction and feeding guidelines that apply within the flight aviary.

Our birds are friendly. Very friendly! Many of them enjoy physical contact with visitors and can be incredibly curious. Parrots have powerful beaks for cracking hard seed pods. They are also ideal for removing jewellery. Please remove all loose items from your person, including ear rings, hats, watches and sunglasses and stow them safely away until outside the aviary.

If a bird lands on your shoulder please do not make any sudden moves or loud noises. It may scare the bird, which may dig in with its claws and flap its wings in order to keep its balance. Once their curiosity is satisfied, the birds will usually fly off by themselves. If a bird is unusually "sticky" and has worn out its welcome, seek assistance from our staff.

Umbrellas are available at reception for those guests who would rather admire our birds from afar. Please use them responsibly. Umbrellas can scare birds and be hazardous to other visitors.

Bird poo on the shoulder, or even in the hair, is a badge of honour here at Birdworld! It does not stain clothes and is easily removed with a damp cloth when fresh or with a stiff brush when dried.

Any outstretched finger pointed at a bird's head is usually an open invitation for a bite!

Help us care for our birds. Please do not bring any food or drink into the flight aviary. Items can be left at reception if required.

In the interest of hygiene it is always a good idea to wash your hands thoroughly after interacting with wildlife. Handwash gel is available at reception and at the toilets.
